Overview Future Refugia

The research area 'Future Refugia' investigates the refugial spaces of private housing. In ecology, the term 'refugial spaces' (from the Latin refugium = place of refuge, refugia; also, conservation spaces) refers to habitats to which animal or plant species retreat because survival is no longer possible in their original habitats for various reasons. 'Future Refugia' transfers this idea to humans. The project series questions the possibility of natural spaces, recreational spaces and private places of residence and retreat in an increasingly crowded world. 'Future Refugia' summarises recent developments in architecture, interior design and landscape architecture. All three disciplines have to react: ideally, not much should be built any more, as the required economy of resources demands more repair and transformation of the existing stock, which entails a change in interior concepts; rising rents are driving people out of the inner cities, so that alternatives in rural space are becoming more important, space that is, however, becoming increasingly small-scale because cultural landscapes are increasingly sealed or used for economic purposes.

Overview Direktorenhaus

Direktorenhaus in Berlin is one of the leading exhibition houses for applied arts in Germany. Since 2010, the museum in the center of the German capital, run by the Meisterrat (German Craft Council), presents selected unique pieces, limited series as well as conceptual design objects. The exhibitions focus on the latest trends in the applied arts. At the same time, the Direktorenhaus does not only show «aesthetic phenomena»: Equally important is the increased importance of design in politics and society, especially in the field of sustainable future planning.
